Dietary supplement regulation in the United States (Book ...
Contrary to the common belief that dietary supplements are "unregulated" in the United States, nutrients and other dietary ingredient-containing products have been regulated in this country for a little over a century at least in some capacity, initially through the Pure Food and Drug Act (PFDA) of 1906 and culminating with the many anticipated
FDA Regulation Of Drugs Versus Dietary Supplements
In 1994, the Dietary Supplement Health and Education Act (DSHEA) defined dietary supplements as a category of food, which put them under different regulations than drugs. They are considered safe until proven otherwise.

The DSHEA says that dietary supplements cannot contain anything that may have a significant or unreasonable risk of illness or injury when the supplement is used as directed on the label, or with normal use if there are no directions on the label.
